Personal alarm and telecare providers

Many people who live alone or who are alone for long periods choose to have an alarm system so that they can summon assistance should they require it. There is a large choice of systems available, ranging from simple pull-cord alarms which activate a flashing light or bell outside the home through to auto dialler alarms which dial, via a telephone, through to present numbers, to telecare systems which monitor and connect directly to a 24-hour monitoring station. If you need an alarm that calls through to a monitoring station, below find a list of companies that provide this service.

This list is by no means exhaustive and just intended as a guide to the many suppliers and sources of products available.
